Dean Brian Allen and Associate Dean Leah Sciabarrasi bring a powerful blend of industry experience and academic expertise to create a program focused on real-world impact.

With a shared vision of developing scholar-practitioners, they've built a program that combines applied research, strategic thinking, and strong student support. From structured coursework to early dissertation guidance and mentorship, every element is designed to help working professionals grow into confident, data-informed leaders ready to solve complex business challenges.

Excelsior has introduced updates to make transfer credit more flexible and support faster degree completion.

Transfer credit can now be evaluated after admission, and degree requirements have been streamlined so more prior learning can count. General education requirements have also been simplified, and eligible students may now return within one year through an easier reactivation process.

Updates are rolling out in phases that started this June, with additional programs planned for later this year.
